GOSSIP. Women the Best Advertising Agents in the World.

If I am totally devolt of sense in very other respect I know enough to keep my yawp still when a woman is talking. And when two women are at it I'm as dumb as a last season's canned lobster. I did think I had encountered garralous women under almost every circumstance, but I give you my word witnessed Just the spectacle "Klem" as paritnyed, and it took place in the yard just east of my house. That's just he difference between men and women before two men would carry on conver-sation through a knot-hole they'd say nothing and saw wood—even fence wood. But woman must talk. It's just as natural as It is for her to despise drinkers, smokers, dirty boots, crowds, rain, and thes.

I went riding in the horse cars yesterday for the simple purpose of listening to what the women had to say, and to see how much real pility sense and valuable information I could pick up.

They serve the same bill of fare there that they do at all their lunch rooms, and charge the same prices. But wasn't it neat and clean in there? And didn't those fans make it nice and cool? And wasn't everything served so promptly! I say that's what Washington should have had years ago. It's right down town just handy when we're out shopping. What a splendid place to meet one another. Alexandría, yesterday, and indulged in a rough and tumble fight, in which, according to the accounts, the Englishman had the best of it. George Northedge, the middleweight, and Billy Monyhan, a well known Baltimore lightweight, were in the bar chatting with Fielden when Young entered and called for a cigar. Fielden spoke to him and offered to shake hands, but Young refused and characterized him as no good, and added several remarks to the effect that if he would come around from behind the bar he would do him. Fielden accepted the offer, and the two were soon to a roughand-tumble scrap, in which both were pretty hadly used up, sithough Fielden had the best of it.
